> "Hi-ya, Bill? Hear you're leaving the old outfit. I've got another two months to go!"

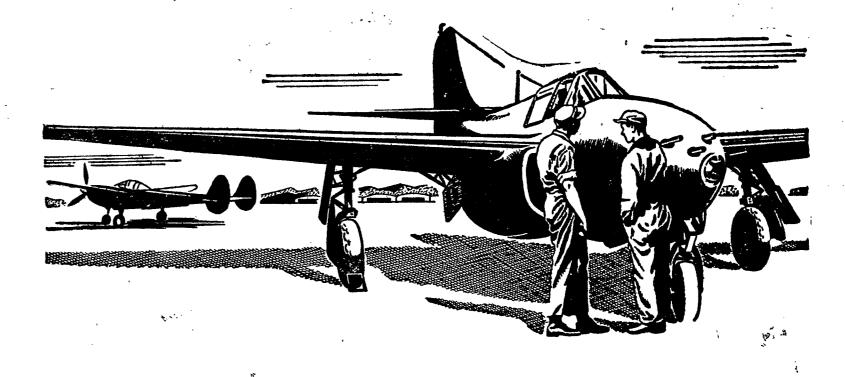

"Changed my mind, Joe. I'm staying in."

"Staying in! Three days ago you couldn't have gotten out of the Army fast enough!"

"I just got carried away with the rest of you guys. Now that I've thought it over, I've decided that I can't afford to give up all that the Army Air Forces have to offer me."

"Well, how about that big-pay civilian job you were talking about?"

"I'm still heading for the GOOD JOB the Army has for me."

Pretty smart, Bill. You can enlist now for $1\frac{1}{2}$, 2, or 3 years and prepare yourself for a great future in aviation. The technical schools of the Army Air Forces are among the best in the world. And you can specialize in such fields as radar, television, jet-propulsion and radio. When you get out, you'll be qualified for a good job.

And in the meantime, you and your family will live a normal life and save money for the future. There are generous family allowances. Your food, quarters and clothing are free ... and the whole family will benefit by the best of free medical and dental care. You'll live on a permanent base and you'll have a 30-day paid furlough every year. And don't forget, you can retire with a life income any time after 20 years of service. For full details about enlisting or reenlisting in the U. S. Army Air Forces, stop in today.

MORE FOR MISSISSIPPI

Substations like that above are used to transform power at high transmission voltages to power at lower voltages for local distribution. Such stations are, in effect, local power plants and are used to supply communities and large industries. The small station shown has a capacity of 600 horsepower and, in most cases, capacity can be increased by installing larger transformers.

Increasing the capacity of existing substations and building new substations to serve Mississippi's ever growing power needs is a part of Mississippi Power Company's four year, $11,000,000 construction program.

This program provides, in advance of need, for an increasing availability of electric service for home, farm, and factory.
